

Monologue on TRENDS

You are going to give a talk about TRENDS.	The text of the monologue	Vocabulary, Grammar Structures, Linking Words and Phrases
Step 1. Introduction 1. Start with a hook sentence that will attract the listener's attention (a quote, a proverb, etc.). 2. Lead your speech steadily to the main part of your talk. 3. The introduction may consist of 3-6 sentences.	To begin with, trends are all around us — in fashion, technology, music, and even education. They shape the way people think, behave, and communicate. As a matter of fact, trends can start suddenly and spread rapidly, turning ordinary things into global sensations. Some people follow them blindly, while others try to create their own. In fact, every generation defines itself through trends, and understanding them helps us predict how the future will look.
Step 2. It's the New Thing 2.1. What is a trend? Speak about the way trends develop and people who are influential in their development. 2.2. Explain why trends might be important to business owners.	A trend is something that becomes popular for a certain period of time. It can be a new idea, product, or lifestyle that quickly spreads among people. Successful brands always try to be one step ahead their competitors and tap into a trend before others notice it. Sometimes, a trend can move rapidly through a population because of social media, making something an overnight sensation. For instance, viral dances or memes may grab the headlines and attract millions of followers in just a few days. Moreover, companies use marketing tools to understand how people behave and what they buy. Those who can understand the spending power of customers are more likely to gain sales and succeed. A well-planned viral marketing campaign can turn a small business into a world-famous brand. At the same time, old ideas can have a revival, especially if people have the same lifestyle and possessions as before. That's why trends are so valuable for business owners — they help predict what people will want next.
Step 3. Describing a trend 3.1. Speak about current trends in different areas (e.g. education, work, music industry, etc.) that young people follow. 3.2. Choose one of the trends you have mentioned in 3.1 and describe major changes caused by the trend.	In particular, there are many current trends influencing young people today — from eco-friendly living to online education and remote work. For example, sustainability has become the new rock and roll: it's not just a movement but a lifestyle. People try to use fewer resources and support ethical brands. In business, digitalisation is a must-have item for success, as every company wants to stay relevant. When we look at statistics, we can see an upward trend in the number of people choosing online learning. The interest in distance education has risen by 30% since 2020 and seems to remain stable. In contrast, traditional classroom attendance shows a downward trend. Social media influencers play a huge role, as they show the results of a study or personal experience to motivate their audience. However, not all trends are positive. As a result, society has to learn to balance fashion and reason, following only the changes that make life truly better.

Step 4. CREATIVE THINKING Introduce your own extra idea(s) on trends that hasn't/haven't been mentioned before. Justify your choice.	On the one hand, trends help us adapt to modern life and express ourselves. On the other hand, they can make people too similar and less creative. That's why I think the most interesting trend today is individuality — the ability to buck the trend and stay authentic. People who are aware of social and cultural movements but still follow their own values inspire others. Another idea is the growing influence of science and innovation. New technologies are not just tools; they represent progressive trends of science and technology that will transform every sphere of life. If we predict future trends correctly, we can make better choices in education, work, and environment.
Step 5. Conclusion Summarise the ideas of steps 2,3,4.	All in all, trends define who we are and where we are heading. They help businesses grow, inspire creativity, and connect people across the globe. Therefore, understanding trends means understanding society itself. Some of them have a lasting influence, while others fade quickly. To be the height of fashion or be all the rage is exciting, but it's even better to create something meaningful and lasting. In conclusion, trends will continue to shape our future, but it's up to us whether we follow them blindly or use them wisely.
